Violations of the Turkish occupation and the armed factions loyal to it against women in north and northeast Syria

In light of the war and the tragic conditions that Syria is going through in general and the north and northeastern regions of Syria in particular, which are subjected to fierce aggressive attacks by the Turkish state and the factions loyal to it, who claim themselves to the Syrian National Army, as it occupied the areas where the Kurds existed and committed the most heinous crimes against the civilian population. There is a flagrant violation of all international and humanitarian laws and norms, such as the four Geneva Conventions of 8/12/1949 and the two protocols attached thereto of 1977, which define war crimes as those grave violations during international and non-international armed conflicts with what is stipulated in Article Two of the (Convention on the Prevention of the Crime of Genocide) Which was approved on December 9, 1948), following actions were committed with the intention of the total or partial destruction of a national, ethnic, or religious group, are considered as genocide:

- 1- Killing members of the group
- 2- Causing serious physical or spiritual harm to the members of the group
- 3- Deliberately subjecting the group to living conditions intended to destroy its physical, in whole or in part
- 4- Imposing measures aimed at preventing having children within the group

When these measures are compared with the reality and facts in north and northeast Syria, we see them identical with them. Verifying these crimes and their truth and collecting evidence is very easy. There are clear and compelling evidence and indications that the Turkish state and the armed factions loyal to it committed these crimes. Destroying houses, kidnapping, torturing, inhuman treatment, arbitrary arrests, and mass violations against the Kurds in particular and the inhabitants of the region in general in order to force them to migrate and leave their homes and properties under the auspices and supervision of the Turkish state

These are clear examples of Turkey's non-compliance with international laws, charters and norms, and are considered a flagrant violation of them

Where we can estimate the numbers of those displaced by the Turkish occupation army and its mercenaries by more than a million civilians, the majority of whom are the Kurdish people and 60% of them are women since the beginning of the attacks of the factions and armed organizations supported by Turkey, starting with the occupation of Afrin and passing through Serekaniye and Gire Spi until today, in addition to the loss of thousands for their lives and thousands were wounded. Simultaneously, civilians' properties were transformed into war spoils for the benefit of mercenaries. And the start of a process of changing the national features of the occupied areas by renaming the regions and institutions in Turkish and Arabic and establishing local councils subject to the Turkish state run by the armed factions.

The indiscriminate bombing and excessive use of force in Afrin, which sheltered hundreds of thousands who were displaced from Aleppo and other Syrian areas fled as a result of the war, led to the displacement of more than 500 thousand inhabitants from their original homes. This is what happened to Sri Kani (Ras al-Ain) and Gri Spi (Tal Abyad). It was documented by many organizations, groups, human rights and media institutions, and resulted in a large number of civilian victims, who were hit by indiscriminate bombing in all regions of the north and north-east of Syria. It is not hidden that the occupying Turkish state and its mercenaries bombed the towns and villages of al-Shahba daily, where there are hundreds of thousands of displaced families from Afrin and its countryside, which resulted in the killing and wounding of dozens of civilians, most of them children and women.

The Third Protocol to the United Nations Convention of 1980, in its first article, forbade the use of certain conventional weapons, and in its second article prohibited the targeting of civilians with these weapons, even if there was a military target nearby. While the Charter of Human Rights, the Geneva Conventions and other relevant conventions refer to the need to provide protection for civilians during the fighting, and the bombing of the Turkish occupation army with white phosphorous resulted in the serious injury of a number of civilians; This is what constitutes a violation of international conventions and a crime against the innocent. On the other hand, the Turkish occupation army, with the help of the armed factions loyal to it, carried out field executions against civilians. This is what emerged in the execution of the Kurdish politician "Hevrin Khalaf and her driver and others on the same day on the M4 international road and in the villages of Seri Kaniye / Ras al-Ain, Girê Sp / Tal Abyad, on 12/10/2019 by the Ahrar al-Sharqiya faction, in addition to the execution of a series of bombings in which many civilians were killed, with the intensification of the Turkish occupation army and its mercenaries' attacks on the countryside of Tal Tamr. In conjunction with the aggression, dozens of videos were leaked out showing the contempt of the Kurds and threats to kill them and behead them, and scenes of mutilating corpses, with the aim of psychological terror for civilians and pushing them to flee To the diaspora what would you make them assimilate into other societies, thus providing a contributing factor to ethnic cleansing; More than 300 thousand civilians were displaced from northeastern Syria in the first week of the aggression on Ras al-Ain and Tal Abyad.

The women and children who are most affected by the brutal war in Syria. The armed factions loyal to the Turkish state have violated the sanctities of homes and killed, kidnapped, raped and violated hundreds of women in Afrin, Serêkaniyê and Tel Abyad, with the knowledge and supervision of the occupying Turkish state, despite the four Geneva Conventions and their protocols that confirmed the protection of women in times of war and armed conflict. Despite the fact that many other international conventions were signed by the United Nations to protect women and children in situations of peace and war, such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Convention on the Rights of the Child and the two international covenants on civil rights and Political, economic, social and cultural, and the International Convention against Violence against Women and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). However, we see that all these agreements have become ink on paper and without value, since the first day of its aggressive war on the regions of Afrin, Ras al-Ain and Tal Abyad, have struck down these agreements and considered them as if they did not exist, as international humanitarian law has granted women Children have immunity and protection in times of armed conflict, as they are part of the civilians who must be spared the harms of war in addition to giving them special protection commensurate with their special status, which distinguishes them from other civilians.

In addition, the rules of international humanitarian law approved additional provisions to enhance protection, care and relief for women and children, because they are distinguished by their special nature and needs due to the ease with which they are exposed to harm and because there are types of harm that could be inflicted on them alone, as there were legal provisions to prevent their targeting during war operations. Or killing them, transferring them, or deporting them outside the occupied areas, or violating their honor, beliefs, traditions, and customs, subjecting them to torture or inhuman treatment, or harming their human dignity, using them as human shields, or taking them hostage.

As Article 17 of the Geneva Convention states in its third paragraph:

All acts that constitute forms of oppression and cruel and inhuman treatment of women and children, including imprisonment, torture, execution by firing squad, wholesale detention, collective punishment, the destruction of homes and forcible expulsion, which are committed by the belligerents during military operations or in occupied territories are considered among the criminal acts.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights requires all states to fully fulfill their obligations according to the Geneva Protocol of 1925 and the Geneva Accords of 1949, as well as other international law instruments related to respect for human rights during armed conflicts, which provide important guarantees for the protection of women and children.

In 2000, the Security Council adopted Resolution No. (1325) related to women, peace and security, in which a clear international concept and action plan was established to protect women during armed conflicts. The resolution calls on all parties involved in armed conflict to take special measures to protect women and girls from Physical violence and calls for those who commit crimes against women to be brought to justice. Paragraph 4 - States Parties, in accordance with their obligations under international humanitarian law, to protect the civilian population in armed conflict, shall take all feasible measures to ensure the protection and care of children affected by armed conflict.

And the Turkish state has committed war crimes on Syrian soil and in north and east Syria in particular, and we cite what was committed against women:

1- -Intentional killing: The first thing that the Turkish state started with through its loyalist faction called Ahrar al-Sharqiya was the assassination of the engineer Hevrin Khalaf, the Secretary-General of the Future Syria Party and her private driver with her, and dozens of women from Afrin & its surrounding villages. The killing of Fatema Kanna, aged 70 & Malak Nabeah, who whose body was found after being kidnapped for 15 days in northern Aleppo. The two sisters Khadija and Jamila Ahmed Al-Mousa, who were killed in cold blooded on 01/24/2020 in their house in one of the villages of Sere Kaniye, are hard examples of that.

2- Directing attacks against the civilian population as such, or against individual civilians who do not participate directly in military action. As a result of this targeting, a large number of civilians were killed, including nearly twenty women and eight children, and the number of wounded were approximately 43 women and 82 children, according to statistics made by the Kurdish Red Crescent

3- launching attacks against users, installations, materials, units, or vehicles used in a humanitarian aid or peace-keeping mission pursuant to the United Nations Charter as long as they provide the protection to civilians or civilian sites under the international law of armed conflict. The result of these attacks was the killing of two Among the paramedic workers in the Kurdish Red Crescent and the targeting of other medical staff.

4-The war crime of unlawful imprisonment of those covered by protection in the Geneva Convention of 1949, which is mentioned in Article 8, Paragraph 2, Paragraph A of the International Criminal Court - Elements of Crimes

5-The war crime of attacking civilians as individuals who do not take a direct part in fighting, in accordance with Article 8, Paragraph 2, Clause B of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court - Elements of Crimes

6- One of the biggest violations committed by the Turkish state and the factions loyal to it was the mutilation of the corpses of the fighters of the YPJ including Amara Rinas and before that, Barin Kobani, is a violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which stipulates that the dead must be buried respectfully and if possible according to the teachings of their religion and that their graves are appropriately respected and preserved.

7- Turkey and the armed groups loyal to it also mistreated female prisoners of the YPJ fighters by insulting them and swearing at them. This is what happened with the fighter Cicek, and this is a clear violation of the Third Geneva Convention concerning Prisoners of War, which confirmed that prisoners of war must be treated humanely at all times. In particular, against all acts of violence or threats, against insults and the curiosity of the masses. Measures of reprisal against prisoners of war are prohibited. Article 13.

The Turkish state, as an occupying state, is responsible for the actions and violations committed by the factions loyal to it and is responsible for all the damage that these factions cause in terms of damage to female prisoners of the YPJ fighters the International Criminal Court is responsible for punishing the Turkish state for all the crimes committed by Turkey. The aim of this war was from the beginning to destroy the will of women in north and east Syria because women were from the first day of the Rojava revolution an effective dynamic force in the face of the enemies of freedom and decided to obtain their rights. The recent Turkish attack against the members of the Star Conference Zahra Barkal and her companions, is an attempt to break that strong will, through which the Erdogan government and its loyalists see their inevitable death

These violations practiced by the Turkish occupation state and its loyalists, which have been listed and represent a breach of all international laws and norms, in their content, in addition to physical violence, constitute social and psychological violence against women in particular and society in general. The following is an account of some of that:

The occupation and the conditions of armed conflict lead to the fragmentation of social structures, which causes weakening of women, marginalization of their status and deepening of the inequality that they already suffer from. In addition, all this is accompanied by an increase in violence against women within society. He is surrounded by human dignity to oblige them to exchange sex for food or working in prostitution, thus affecting her mental and physical health, and to be affected with fatal diseases

Occupation and armed conflict are also considered among the most important causes of internal displacement and asylum, as women suffer the scourge of displacement in multiple forms.

The sexual assault, which is the worst form of violence that a woman may be exposed to under occupation, violates her humanity, privacy, body and psychology, as it includes rape, sexual violence, forced marriage, arrests, forced prostitution, genital mutilation, vaccinations, pregnancy, abortion and the deliberate transmission of diseases, all of which are the culture of war are considered a victory for the perpetrators. These practices may aim at ethnic cleansing and producing children from the aggressors, as happened with the kidnapped Yazidi women from Shengal.

All the laws and agreements that we have mentioned that prohibit systematic violence against women, children and safe societies, were the result of great efforts after the world lived through two wars that claimed the lives of millions of people and led to the achievement of some peace and safety in it, but we do not see any concern about it now, due to the terrible silence and indifference of the international institutions that sponsor them. Our world and the preserved lives of human beings have become vulnerable to abuse before ever.

The woman who faces all these difficult circumstances and suffered from exploitation in all its forms cannot reveal what she was subjected to because in this case she is killed twice, once by the enemy and again by the family and society, and the woman whose rights have been violated and suffered from the occupation must have a solid will and that It takes lessons from the experiences of war and its suffering, so it develops itself and narrates what it has suffered, reveals itself from its enemies, and exposes their violations of its right and the right of its society. It will not deviate from the approach of freedom and will defend its rights until victory is achieved.
